Mom faces charges after son suspected of ingesting drugs

COURT A 24-year-old Gatineau woman is facing numerous criminal charges after her two-year-old son was rushed to hospital after it was believed he ingested drugs on Sunday evening.

Gatineau emergency crews were called to a residence near Mont-Bleu Boulevard after a child was found unconscious next to a water bottle believed to have contained gamma-hydroxybutyrate — the rave drug commonly known as GHB.

Paramedics took the boy to a hospital in Hull and he was transferred to the Children's Hospital of Eastern Ontario. Police said they are analyzing the liquid inside the bottle.

The woman faces charges of child endangerment, criminal negligence causing harm and drug possession. She next appears in court July 27.

Facebook has 30 days to shape up

Watchdog could take site to court over privacy concerns

Canada has become the first country in the world to rein in Facebook's giant, information-sharing machine, with the federal privacy commissioner taking a poke at the global, social-networking site for being too loose with users' personal data.

Facebook Inc., which has 250 million users worldwide including an estimated 12 million in this country, pledged yesterday to work with Canada to improve its privacy settings, especially with regard to third parties who put games and quizzes on Facebook.

"We're going to continue the dialogue," Chris Kelly, chief privacy officer for Facebook, said in a phone interview from Facebook's headquarters in California. "We have every confidence that we'll come to an acceptable conclusion."

Kelly said that any improvements made to respond to federal privacy commissioner Jennifer Stoddart's concerns will apply to Facebook operations worldwide.

Stoddart has been investigating Facebook's policies and practices of sharing information after a complaint a year ago from University of Ottawa students.

Yesterday, she released a report that concludes the site contravenes Canadian privacy laws in four areas,

At issue

- A lack of adequate safeguards to restrict outside software developers — of games, quizzes and the like — from gaining access to personal profiles of users and their online friends.
- Facebook's indefinite retention of personal information of people who have deactivated their accounts.
- A lack of clarity about how Facebook material can be used in the event of a person dying, or "memorialization" concerns.
- A lack of protection of information about non-users — people who may not have their own Facebook accounts, but whose personal data may be on friends' or associates' pages.

and gave Facebook 30 days to tighten its procedures. If she is not satisfied with its progress, Stoddart can take the case to Federal Court to force compliance.

Michael Geist, an information-law expert and professor at the University of Ottawa, says the ruling puts Facebook at odds with Canada's laws and is ground-breaking, internationally. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

No chase in hit-and-run: Police

tracey.tong@metronews.ca

INVESTIGATION City police said an Ottawa driver charged after a man suffered two broken legs during a hit-and-run incident at Algonquin College told 9-1-1 operators that he was being chased.

At 1:30 a.m. Wednesday, police were called to an incident on Woodroffe Avenue where a 20-year-old man had been run over by a vehicle that had been backing up.

The victim suffered two broken legs. Police said Thursday the victim is recovering in hospital with serious but non-life-threatening injuries.

Police said the driver involved in the collision was not at the scene, but that they arrested a man a short distance away.

Police alleged that the driver placed a 9-1-1 call shortly after the incident, said Ottawa police Det.

Steven Catral.

"He stated that he was getting chased by three men," said Catral.

Through the course of the investigation, police determined that the chase did not take place, Catral said.

A 40-year-old Ottawa man faces charges of criminal negligence causing bodily harm, failure to stop and identify self and public mischief.

Mohamed Amer, 40, next appears in court on Aug. 24.

Holy hip-hop, gospel take stage at Bluesfest

tracey.tong@metronews.ca

At first, the list of gospel performers inked among Cisco Ottawa Bluesfest's roster of rockers looks a bit out of place.

But to Rev. Mark Gordon, it's not unusual at all.

"I think it's actually complementary," said Gordon, the festival's gospel programmer who introduced the idea of having the genre at Bluesfest to executive director Mark Monahan over a decade ago.

"There's a lot of blues music and soul music in gospel — a lot of artists like Al Green, Gladys Knight, Whitney Houston, Bono from U2, Elvis Presley, they all started out singing in church choirs. And a lot of artists are going back and recording albums to take them back to where they first started."

This weekend, the 11th annual World Gospel Jam at Cisco Ottawa Bluesfest — which consists of the All Nations Gospel choir, Voices of Praise, Newworldson — which Gordon calls the "U2 of Christian music" — Reggie Young and Gospel Park, Israel and New Breed, Papa

And the great thing about gospel music today is that it combines traditional gospel music with jazz, hip-hop, Classical, Baroque and R&B, said Gordon. With "new" genres like pop gospel, reggae gospel, Christian rap and "Holy hip-hop," gospel today breaks the stereotypes of the past, he said.

While the music isn't religious, it spiritual, said Gordon.

"Everybody needs hope and light and encouragement in terms of a sense of direction. You're not going to hear about sex and violence, but you will hear about love, hope, light and compassion."

Food highlight at 'authentic' festival

In trying to determine how good a local cultural festival is, you need go no further than to ask a member of the community.

"It's all authentic," said Ray Skaff, who is acting as a spokesman for the Ottawa Lebanese Festival, marking its 19th year in 2009. "The food is genuine, homemade food," he said.

"We have an army of volunteers from our community who work day and night to create the food in the St. Elias centre. You can't get more authentic than this."

Just ask the 45,000 people who attend the five-day festival at the St. Elias Cathedral every year.

The Lebanese community has one of the biggest cultural populations in Ottawa, and the festival, which runs through Sunday, is a chance for them to enjoy and share with the greater Ottawa community the food, dance, music and art, Skaff said.

"We love to see people here," said volunteer Kareem Saikaley, who has been with the festival since it began. "It doesn't matter which nationality, which religion."

Like many cultural celebrations, food is one of the highlights at the festival.

"We have some decadent desserts that you can't get anywhere else," Skaff said.

The traditional Beirut Lounge, with its Arguilly tent, is also popular, said Skaff. "There's always a lineup of people to get in."

In the end, the celebration is much about Lebanese values, said Skaff.

"It's about celebrating life and enjoying life day-to-day," he said. "It's a celebration of good people, good food and good times."

Man in burnt-out minivan ID'd

CRASH Police have identified an Ottawa man who was found dead in a burned minivan in Chelsea.

An autopsy done in Montreal determined Donald Cuzner, 51, died of asphyxiation, Josee Forest, an officer with MRC des Collines police, said Thursday.

On July 8, a burned car was reported on Cuzner Road — a road with the same name as the victim, Forest said. Police found the body of a man inside.

The vehicle was cold when police arrived, Forest said. They believe the minivan was involved in a collision and the victim was unable to get out of the vehicle and alcohol may have been a factor. METRO OTTAWA

Mexico hits back at new visa policy

IMMIGRATION Mexico said Thursday that Canadian diplomats and officials would now require visas to visit the country, a retaliatory move after Ottawa imposed new visa rules for Mexican visitors.

Mexican Foreign Minister Patricia Espinosa told reporters after meeting Foreign Affairs Minister Lawrence Cannon in Washington that she had voiced her country's opposition to the new Canadian visa rules imposed on Monday, calling the move counterproductive. Asked whether Mexico would retaliate, Espinosa said a visa arrangement for Canadian government officials and diplomats wanting to visit her country would be suspended. REUTERS

Man mourns wife, son killed in Iran plane crash

On Wednesday morning, Vahik Khachik dropped off his wife and three-year-old son at Tehran's Imam Khomeini International Airport.

The Toronto family had been in Iran for a week and a half, attending Khachik's niece's wedding and baptizing their son, three-year-old Edward.

Nana Antashy, Khachik's wife, was now heading to Armenia to help plan her sister's birthday party and introduce Edward to her mother, whom she hadn't seen in five years. Edward was homesick, and wanted to return to Canada.

"I saw them off from the behind the glass," Khachik said quietly during a phone interview from Iran.

Crash witnesses

• Witnesses at the scene reported seeing the plane's tail on fire before it hit the ground front-first, leaving a four-metre deep trench. The aircraft was smashed to pieces.

"That was the last time I saw them."

He had barely returned to his sister's house from the airport when he heard that the plane had gone down.

The Caspian Airlines flight crashed Wednesday in an agricultural area around 11:30 a.m. local time, 16 minutes after takeoff, killing all 156 passengers and 12 crew. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Tires go green

Ontario investing $2M in recycling trial

The rubber is finally hitting the road on Ontario's plan to recycle used tires.

Premier Dalton McGuinty says $2 million is being invested in an experimental Sault Ste. Marie plant that will use "green" technology to reclaim old tires.

"They're going to be taking tires traditionally seen as waste and converting that into money and jobs," the premier told a news conference — where he revealed the funding for Ellsin Environmental Ltd.

While Ellsin's pilot project will create only 25 jobs, McGuinty predicted that if it's successful it could mean many more "good-paying jobs of the future."

Premier Dalton McGuinty is investing $2 million in a used-tires experiment.

There are more than 2.8 million used tires now stockpiled at 95 sites throughout Ontario.

Some 12 million tires are disposed of each year in the province.

Existing plants in Ontario, Quebec and several

U.S. states then crush the old tires into rubber crumbs the size of gum-balls for industrial use.

They can be transformed into other rubber products like mats, playground equipment and artificial turf or burned as fuel.

But starting on Sept. 1, a new $5.84 fee will be put on every passenger tire sold in Ontario, along with different levies for other types of tires.

The expected $22 million that will be generated from the charge will be given to Ontario Tire Stewardship, a non-profit consortium of manufacturers and importers, which will run a new recycling effort.

Farmers singing the summer blues

As their crops falter, they're lobbying the province for weather insurance

It's not your imagination. Summer has been a bit of a bust.

July has been a cold one. June wasn't much better.

Ask Ontario's farmers. Horticultural crops — mainly berries at this time of year — have been decimated. And other crops aren't faring much better.

"We're two weeks behind season on sweet corn," said Bette Jean Crews, president of the Ontario Farmers Association, herself a farmer.

"And we still get those early frosts, so (a late summer) doesn't lengthen the season, it just shortens it."

Field crops — wheat and soy among them — have also seen lower yields, she said. And it gets worse.

"If we continue to get

"We're two weeks behind season on sweet corn."

Bette Jean Crews

cold, damp weather at harvest we get mould, and then it's all rejected," she said.

The OFA is in the process of lobbying the provincial government for weather insurance. In the meantime, said Crews, the best Ontario's farmers can do is hope.

But a cool summer is not without benefits. Energy consumption province-wide dropped 10 per cent this June compared to last. About three per cent of the drop is attributable to the weather, and the rest to Ontario's slumping manufacturing sector.

The biggest drop has been during peak afternoon hours, when air conditioner use tends to climb with the temperature.

Environment Canada weather models show a return to seasonal temperatures starting toward the end of the month.

Ski jumpers will appeal

OLYMPICS Women ski jumpers say they will appeal a court ruling that dismissed their bid to force Olympic organizers to let them compete in next year's Winter Games in Vancouver.

The women said Thursday they believe the B.C. Court of Appeal will be able to act quickly enough for women's ski jumping to be included in the 2010 Games, scheduled to begin in February.

The 15 women sued the Vancouver Organizing

Man guilty of selling shuttle secrets

An ex-Boeing engineer was found guilty Thursday of passing space shuttle technology secrets to China after becoming the first person tried under a 1996 federal law that bans theft of trade secrets for the benefit of a foreign government. A federal judge who heard the case without a jury convicted Dongfan (Greg) Chung, 73, of conspiracy to commit economic espionage, economic espionage to benefit a foreign country, acting as an agent of the People's Republic of China and making false statements to the FBI. REUTERS

U.S. military personnel escort a group of journalists with no cameras or recording materials to a court hearing for the five Sept. 11, 2001 attack co-defendants, at Camp Justice, the site of the U.S. war crimes tribunal compound, at Guantanamo Bay U.S. Naval Base, on Thursday.

Don't move trial: 9-11 families

Alleged conspirators' future unclear

The first military commission for the five alleged 9/11 conspirators under the Obama administration began with a boycott, was beset by delays and ended with a tossed paper airplane passed from one defendant to his co-accused.

The hearing yesterday legally had little impact, since the case is essentially in limbo until a U.S. Justice-Department task force decides where detainees will be tried once this prison closes in January. But as U.S. President Barack Obama confronts criticism that he moved too swiftly in vowing to shut Guantanamo, what happens here could matter politically.

And the nine relatives of 9/11 victims the Pentagon brought to witness the hearing say they plan to loudly take their message home.

"I'm not going to close my mouth," said Gary Reiss, whose 23-year-old son Joshua, a bond trader at Cantor-Fitzgerald in New York City, died in the attack while working on the 105th floor of the World Trade Center's North Tower.

"Anybody I know who has any kind of importance is going to know what this camp is all about."

In an emotionally charged and lengthy press conference last night the relatives lashed out at Obama's plan to transfer these cases to federal or military courts in the U.S. and close the prison.

"My question to all of you is why should we move it. Give me a legal reason," asked Janet Roy, whose brother was killed on 9/11.

Critics of Guantanamo's military commissions, established in 2006 under the Bush administration, praised Obama's pledge to revamp the legal process, which permitted hearsay evidence and intelligence gathered by "coercive measures."

There are more than 220 cases, including that of Canadian Omar Khadr, which the Obama task force is now studying.

But the cases of the five co-accused — Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ramzi Binalshibh, Ali Abdul Aziz Ali, Walid bin Attash and Mustafa Ahmed al-Hawsawi — are being most closely watched. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Ahmadinejad vows tougher approach towards the West

IRAN Iran's re-elected President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad said on Thursday his next government "would bring down the global arrogance," signalling a tougher approach towards the West after June's disputed election.

"The Iranian nation elected somebody they (Iran's enemies) did not want. The Iranian nation's choice was their nightmare," the hardline president told a big crowd at the country's most prominent religious shrine in the northeastern city of Mashhad.

Ahmadinejad's fierce attack on Tehran's "enemies" is likely to further disappoint the United States and its allies, which are trying to engage the Islamic Republic in direct talks over its nuclear program.

Western leaders have criticized a crack-down on protests that followed the June 12 presidential election, which the defeated moderate candidate Mirhossein Mousavi says was rigged.

Ahmadinejad said enemies had tried to interfere and foment aggression in Iran. He said Tehran wanted "logic and negotiations" but that Western powers had insulted the nation and should apologize. REUTERS

More sanctions on North Korea

ARMS The UN Security Council announced sanctions Thursday against five North Korean organizations and five individuals for involvement in Pyongyang's nuclear and ballistic missile activities.

Transfer of two weapons-related products to North Korea also will be banned under the measure announced by Turkey's UN Ambassador Fazli Corman, chairman of the Security Council's North Korea sanctions committee.

The measure, binding on all 192 UN member states, slaps an asset freeze on the named organizations and individuals and travel bans on the individuals. It greatly lengthens an existing blacklist, consisting only of two companies and a bank involved in Pyongyang's nuclear and missile programs.

Arms sales are a vital source of foreign currency for North Korea. REUTERS

Obama's pick appears on track for Supreme Court

COURT President Barack Obama's Supreme Court pick Sonia Sotomayor looked headed for confirmation as Senate hearings wound up Thursday with some Republicans open to her bid to become the court's first Hispanic justice.

But conservative critics drove home one final dramatic point on Sotomayor's record on race, calling testimony from two Connecticut firefighters who said she had ruled to deny them the right to promotion because of their ethnic background. Sotomayor took her last questions from the Senate Judiciary Committee, calmly parrying Republican attempts to depict her as liberally biased and unfit for the lifetime job. "I can't think of any greater service that I can give to the country than to be given the privilege of becoming a justice of the Supreme Court," Sotomayor said. REUTERS

India, Pakistan meet but no peace talks yet

Tensions from Mumbai attacks have not dissolved

India and Pakistan agreed on Thursday to work together to fight terrorism and ordered their top diplomats to meet as often as needed to try to rebuild ties damaged by last year's Mumbai attacks.

But Indian Prime Minister Manmohan Singh, speaking after talks with his Pakistani counterpart Yusuf Raza Gilani in Egypt, ruled out a resumption of formal peace talks, known as the "composite dialogue," that Islamabad has been seeking.

"Composite dialogue cannot begin unless and until terrorist heads which shook Mumbai are properly accounted for, (and) perpetrators of these heinous crimes are brought to book," Singh told a news conference after talks with Gilani.

India broke off the formal peace process after the attack on Mumbai by Pakistan-based militants who India says must have been helped by Pakistani security agents.

Islamabad denies state agencies had any role and says it will prosecute those accused of involvement in the attacks.

In a statement after meeting on the fringes of a Non-Aligned Movement summit, the prime ministers "affirmed their resolve to fight terrorism and to co-operate with each other to this end."

"Both prime ministers recognized that dialogue is the only way forward," the statement said, adding that the countries' senior diplomats would continue meeting.

Thursday's talks in the Egyptian resort of Sharm el-Sheikh was the third high-level encounter between the two neighbours since the Mumbai assault.

"It's a good step forward and it's a way out of the impasse that the two sides found themselves in after Mumbai," said C. Raja Mohan, professor of South Asia studies at Singapore's Nanyang Technology University.

"They have affirmed their faith in dialogue without making any commitment on the precise nature of dialogue which means it's open-ended and India will make its decision about dialogue when it is satisfied with Pakistan's performance on terrorism," said Hasan Askari Rizvi, a Lahore-based independent analyst. REUTERS

Pressure builds on Japan PM; calls to quit expected

POLITICS Pressure mounted on Japanese Prime Minister Taro Aso on Thursday after ruling party lawmakers called for a meeting to debate the party's ailing fortunes at which his harshest critics are expected to seek his resignation.

Aso's plan for an election on Aug. 30 — announced just a day after the opposition Democrats trounced the conservative Liberal Democratic Party (LDP) in a Tokyo metropolitan vote — has sparked chaos in the ruling party.

Surveys show the opposition Democratic Party of Japan (DPJ), whose platform includes pledges to break bureaucrats' grip on policy to cut waste and to pay more heed to the interests of consumers and workers than companies, will likely win the national election due by October. A Democrat victory would end more than 50 years of almost unbroken rule by the business-friendly LDP. REUTERS

Black boxes recovered from Iranian plane

Two badly damaged black box recorders have been recovered from a Tupolev aircraft that crashed in Iran on Wednesday, killing all 168 people on board, official media reported on Thursday.

The cause of the worst air disaster in the Islamic Republic for six years was still unknown, state television said.

Deputy Transport Minister Ahmad Majidi said it was "likely due to technical problems" as the pilot was experienced, the semi-official Mehr News Agency reported.

The Russian-built Caspian Airlines aircraft was on its way to neighbouring Armenia's capital Yerevan when it came down after catching fire in mid-air and plunging into farmland 16 minutes after departing Tehran.

Arlen Davudyan, who represents Caspian Airlines in Yerevan, said the plane had a full technical check in Russia about a month ago and permission

The aircraft exploded on impact and left scattered bits of incinerated metal and fragments of the bodies of 153 passengers and 15 crew across a wide area around a deep smoking crater.

Opportunity knocks

Aboriginals want to be active participants in economy

Wendy Cukier

Next week, Phil Fontaine, National Chief of the Assembly of First Nations (AFN), will step down and his successor will be elected. The well-respected and charismatic leader has had many moral and material victories, including the settlement of claims arising out of the 150-year residential school tragedy.

Less well-known, perhaps, is his success in advancing an integrated approach to economic and social development with a clear message: "First Nations want to be active participants in Canada's economy."

His message is gaining traction with the private sector and government. About four per cent of the Canadian population is Aboriginal, but it is the youngest and fastest growing segment and expected to account for 25 per cent of new workers by 2020. Currently, levels of literacy and educational attainment among Aboriginal people are lower than for average Canadians, a gap costing billions of dollars annually. Investments that close this gap will save money and ensure Canada has a globally competitive workforce.

But there is good news as well — self-employment among Aboriginal people has more than doubled in the last two decades and Aboriginal businesses created with support from Aboriginal financial institutions have doubled the average success rate (58 per cent versus 33 per cent). While many are small scale, there are little known, multimillion-dollar companies and success stories in virtually every sector.

Fontaine has persistently pushed for an integrated approach to economic development, attracting an impressive range of industry partners. The AFN Corporate Challenge connects First Nation and corporate communities around partnerships, investments, procurement, and employment. Last month, Indian and Northern Affairs Canada announced a new federal framework on Aboriginal Economic Development highlighting success stories and proposing an integrated approach. However, the language that targets those who are "already well positioned" and "already investment ready" suggests it could help the "rich get richer" and leave the rest behind.

Given the immense disparities remaining in Aboriginal communities, and needs for investments in education, basic and advanced infrastructure, no one size fits all. Building local capacity to design local programs to respond to economic priorities is fundamental.

While there is no shortage of politics or competing interests, the opportunity is immense, as is the cost of failure.

Doing the right thing, however, is seldom the easy thing to do.

Wendy Cukier is the associate dean of the Ted Rogers School of Management at Ryerson University, and the founder of Ryerson's Diversity Institute.

Decision-makers living in a different world

UrbanCompass

Steve Collins

metronews.ca/collins

It's a big country and Ottawa is far, not only geographically but experientially, from many of the places its laws affect. That distance grows ever greater when it comes to First Nations communities.

The cabinet ministers, lawyers, researchers and departmental staff here live in a different world from many Aboriginal Canadians, as do most of us. In 2005, when E. coli poisoned the water of the Kashechewan First Nation in northern Ontario, some residents were put up in a hotel here, just a few blocks from Parliament Hill, but so often, our decision-makers seldom get such a direct look at the people their policies affect.

UNICEF Canada offers a litany of depressing statistics in its 2009 report, Aboriginal Children's Health: Leaving No Child Behind.

While the report acknowledges some progress has been made in Aboriginal health, education and housing, the numbers still tell a brutal story of privation within one of the world's most affluent countries: Infant mortality (three to seven times higher than the national average on reserves), tuberculosis (90 times higher among the Inuit), teen pregnancy (seven times higher) and suicide (twice as high).

And when it comes to influenza A (H1N1), also known as swine flu, the numbers game isn't any better. In Manitoba, Aboriginal leaders cite an infection rate of 135 per 100,000 people, compared to 20 per 100,000 in Canada as a whole.

While Canada prepares for a nasty flu season this fall, reserves are preparing for potential disaster, aggravated by crowded living conditions, widespread pre-existing respiratory illness and, in some cases, no running water.

In an illustration of the many ways in which the deck is stacked against First Nations people, a controversy over providing hand sanitizer, which contains alcohol, raged among bureaucrats while the virus spread:

Which was the bigger problem, swine flu or substance abuse?

The UNICEF report isn't all gloom, though, and solutions are on offer. Among them, the growing acceptance of Jordan's Principle, which states that, when the health of a First Nations child is at risk, the level of government that is contacted first pays the bills. Jurisdictional red tape gets sorted out after the problem's solved.

A sensible idea, which one could imagine guiding all sorts of government action in this constitutionally entangled country, the principle is, sadly, named for a seriously ill Aboriginal boy who died in Manitoba while governments haggled over just whose problem he was.

Turks see smoking ban as assault on culture

Smokers in Turkey tempted to flout an imminent ban in cafes, restaurants and bars will be spared execution as allegedly meted out in 17th-century Istanbul — but their prime minister has likened cigarettes to terrorism.

That's a measure of how strongly Tayyip Erdogan feels about tobacco. Sultan Murad IV is said to have roamed the streets ordering the execution of those who defied a smoking ban aimed at curbing coffee house sedition.

One of the world's oldest prohibitions of smoking, Murad's failed and as tobacco's popularity grew in Turkey, the saying "smoke like a Turk" took root in languages across Europe. But at a time of economic crisis, the prohibition adding restaurants, cafes and bars to the places where smoking is not allowed — is viewed by a minority as a potential assault on their culture.

Erdogan, who long since banned smoking in cabinet meetings, also faces opposition from owners of thousands of establishments across the Muslim, European Union-candidate country, who see the ban as a threat to their business.

Turkish Prime Minister Tayyip Erdogan is the driving force behind the next phase of a widely popular ban taking effect on July 19, which aims to curb the habit in a country where 22 million people, including around half the adult male population, smoke.

Airlines scramble for fares

WestJet, Air Canada slash seat prices to counter fall slump

It's only mid-July and many parts of the country have yet to experience the swelter of summer, but Canada's two major airlines are already wringing their hands over what's expected to be a brutal fall and winter travel season.

Weighed down by the weak economy, WestJet Airlines Ltd. said yesterday that it is launching a 50 per cent off seat sale for travel between Sept. 8 and Dec. 16. The Calgary-based airline is also offering a temporary price guarantee for customers who book

Slump in June

Both Air Canada and WestJet reported a slump in June load factors — the percentage of seats filled — as consumers cut back on travel spending in what is supposed to be one of the year's busiest travel periods.

before July 23, but later find a cheaper fare for the same flight on WestJet's site. Air Canada, which had introduced its own 40 per cent off sale a day earlier, moved quickly yesterday to match WestJet's fall sale fares.

While seat sales for the slower fall and winter period aren't unheard of in July, this year's sales are on top of fares that have already been discounted in a bid to coax travellers back into the skies.

"This fall is going to be tough," said Robert Kokonis, the president of airline consulting firm AirTrav Inc. "It's going to be lean, dark times and carriers are going to have to resort to extraordinary measures to fill their planes."

Meanwhile, the International Air Transport Association said yesterday that fears of a prolonged recession and rising fuel prices have caused "renewed pessimism" for airlines, with some carriers predicting that it could take until 2011 for the industry to experience a turnaround.

It said premium travel sales, which can account for up to 30 per cent of an airline's revenue, fell by 23.6 per cent in May, which was on top of a 22 per cent decline a month earlier. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Canadians confident, U.S. uncertain over economy

RECOVERY Two surveys, released yesterday, offer strikingly different assessments of the consumer psyche in Canada and the U.S. Amid suggestions the economic crisis has reached a turning point, Canadian consumer confidence is "resilient." That stands in contrast to U.S. consumer sentiment, which continues to sour as Americans cast doubt on the prospects of a speedy recovery.

The TNS Canadian Facts consumer confidence index suggests the country is showing signs of stability after "holding steady" for the third month in a row.

Its July reading was 93.4, slightly better than the 92 scored in June. In fact, July's result suggests that Canadian consumer confidence could be edging back up to the 94.1 level achieved in May.

U.S. consumer sentiment, meanwhile, is heading south, according to a separate report. The RBC Cash index points to a "marked downward shift" for July. The index reflects consumer attitudes and spending by household. It stood at 22.4 for July, an 11.9-point decline from June's 34.3 reading.

Tom Watson, the oldest player in the field, spectacularly rolled back the years with an inspired display commanding the spotlight at the British Open Thursday.

NHL has plenty of questions for Balsillie

COYOTES An NHL expansion team in Hamilton could be worth between $225 million and $265 million, according to documents filed yesterday in the bankruptcy case of the Phoenix Coyotes.

The dollar figure is cited in a "Coyotes Confidential Information Memorandum," but came to light through a publicly available NHL letter as the league is demanding to know every detail of Canadian billionaire Jim Balsillie's business plan if the Coyotes are allowed to move to Hamilton.

The value of a franchise in Hamilton is important because it would form the basis of how much Balsillie would have to pay — on top of his $212.5 million (all figures U.S.) offer for the team — in indemnity and relocation fees to the league and the Toronto Maple Leafs.

The NHL letter to Balsillie's company outlines 23 specific pieces of information the league says it needs before it can approve Balsillie as an owner including "all data, information and/or sources used in calculating the estimated value of an NHL expansion fee ($225 million — $265 million)."

The NHL has never put a price tag on an expansion fee for Hamilton.

Balsillie's legal team indicates he's a bit more than halfway to providing the information. Among the demands from the league:

• Analysis concerning the existing state of Copps Coliseum.

• How long it will take before the team plays in a "fully renovated" Copps Coliseum.

• Where the team might play if renovations interfere with the schedule.

• Financial projections and the basis upon which the business plan for the team operating in Hamilton was built.

• Census and demographic reports for Hamilton.

While the battle between the NHL and Balsillie continued to escalate, the three-way battle among the City of Glendale, Coyotes owner Jerry Moyes and hockey icon Wayne Gretzky headed for the sanctuary of a confidentiality agreement.

Representatives of the three camps asked a judge to force them to keep secret private financial affairs.

The City of Glendale, for example, wants a look at the tax records of Gretzky and Moyes. Moyes, the majority shareholder, and Gretzky, a minority owner as well as coach, claim to be among the largest creditors. Moyes says he's owed $100 million, Gretzky $9.3 million.

The Saxo Bank rider attacked twice in the finale to beat France's Laurent Lefevre and Italian Franco Pellizotti, who were second and third respectively 48 seconds behind.

Italy's Rinaldo Nocentini retained the overall leader's yellow jersey ahead of Spaniard Alberto Contador and Lance Armstrong, second and third respectively.

Sorensen featured in a seven-man breakaway at the 64-km mark that quickly built a gap of over four minutes — and he proved the strongest of

A l roads, they say, lead to Rome. But for Canadian athletes embarking on the World Aquatics Championships this is one thoroughfare where, as a winter country, success has meant swimming upstream.

"The chemical mix is the same," says Pierre La-Fontaine, Canada's head swim coach. "Ice and water ... hockey and swimming. They are both things that we as Canadians naturally do — only in opposite seasons."

Indeed, Canada is a player in the life aquatic.

An inordinate number of divers have worn the Maple Leaf with distinction including Olympic medalists Irene MacDonald, Sylvie Bernier, Annie Pelletier, Anne Montminy and Blythe Hartley. At the Worlds, both Alex Despatie and Emilie Heymans bring multiple Olympic medals to the mix. Both are former world champions who can still make an impact. They are backed up by the next generation of Canadian talent ready to take the plunge in Italy.

Both of the water polo teams are underdogs. However, the women won a bronze medal at Montreal in 2005 and recently claimed silver in the World League Super Final. The men have beaten some of the world's best recently and were competitive at last summer's Olympics in Beijing.

In synchronized swimming, the legacy of Carolyn Waldo and Sylvie Frechette is strong. No Canadian entry should be counted out in this discipline.

In swimming, Canada is once again surfacing. While the glory days of Victor Davis and Alex Baumann are but a fond memory, the exploits of world champion Brent Hayden and Beijing Olympic medallist Ryan Cochrane speak volumes. Hayden has beaten Michael Phelps this season and Cochrane seems poised to replace the retired Grant Hackett of Australia as the No. 1 threat in the watery version of the metric mile.

Don't forget the women.

Annamay Pierse was just off the 200-m breaststroke world record at the recent trials in Montreal. Meantime 15-year-old Amanda Reason smashed the world mark in the 50-m breaststroke, a distance known as the "splash and dash."

All of this is reason to believe that Canadian fish will do more than tread water in the Tiber River, which runs through the eternal city of Rome.

Indeed, they may dive deep to claim golden treasure and swim with the sharks en route to more medals than the five they won in Melbourne, Australia, two years ago.

The Ugly road to film glory

Heigl aims to solidify stardom with rom-com

STEVE GOW

If there's one proverb that actress Katherine Heigl may want to consider, it's that you should be careful what you wish for.

After all, the Emmy Award-winning star of Grey's Anatomy has openly tossed around the notion of leaving her successful television career to attempt stardom on the silver screen — as highlighted by her upcoming romantic comedy The Ugly Truth, in theatres next week.

It's easy to understand Heigl's grand ambition; movie stars have always commanded greater respect than that of the TV thespian. But the 30-year-old actress may be in for a fairly challenging climb. After all, the Hollywood history of actresses jumping from television to movies has been bleak. Just ask Morgan Fairchild. These days the trend more likely favours the migration of movie actresses to television as admired cinematic mainstays like Holly Hunter, Kyra Sedgwick and Glenn Close now shoulder their own successes on the small-screen.

One reason for this movement may be the fact that there are simply more roles for women on TV. As a recent survey by the Center for the Study of Women in Television and Film at San Diego State University noted, "females accounted for 43 per cent of all characters in prime-time last season." Surely, that escalating figure does not translate to the big-screen.

In addition, only three of the top 25 highest-grossing film actresses working today even began their career in television. The pendulum has swung.

Still, maybe Heigl will beat the odds. She's certainly found success in such big-screen hits as Knocked Up.

If she does manage to bridge the acting gap and become a star of the silver screen, she'll certainly join an elite group that also features these talented TV actresses turned cinematic starlets:

INTERVIEW Though Zach Galifianakis is sitting on a comfy couch at the Ritz Carlton, discussing his latest blockbuster film, he says his future plans involve, primarily ... Arby's.

As the first schlubby comedian to earn major box office points since Seth Rogen, Galifianakis is having quite a summer: First, with the success of bro-comedy The Hangover, and then with Disney's part live-action, part animation film, G-Force — which opens next week.

Galifianakis plays scientist Ben, who has trained four guinea pigs to become secret government agents. As much as you'd think that premise is the stuff of one of his skits on funnyordie.com, this is a squeaky clean family film. But that doesn't stop Galifianakis from adding his own irreverent edge to promoting the film.

Q How did you prepare to act with animated guinea pigs?

A I went to a lot of pet shops and tried to talk to guinea pigs and get them to talk back. That failed. Then, I went to New Guinea where that is a delicacy and I ate a lot of them. I got their souls in my body.

Q Has working on G-Force helped you with your own comedy?

A I'll probably just tour with huge guys in guinea pig outfits. It would be so funny if I turned crazy if I could never get off this guinea pig thing. They'll be like, 'Yeah he hangs out with guinea pigs and the California Raisins and McGruff the crime dog now.'

Q With this and The Hangover, you're having an excellent summer. What would make it complete?

A I could use a foot massage.

Q What have you planned to do after this?

A I was going to go Arby's. Then, I have a TV show for HBO that's finished and then I'll hopefully work on a road trip film.

Q Wow, it sounds like you're on the way to owning a gold-gilded toilet seat.

A That's always been my dream, but the whole apparatus should be gold. And I want a fancy car with a chandelier in it. Actually, I don't spend money on anything so nothing will change.

I'll throw it away somehow. Do you want some of it?

His amazing, technicolour career

InFocus
Richard Crouse

metronews.ca/infocus

Joseph Gordon-Levitt's name could easily have ended up on the same roll call as Mindy Cohn, Adam Rich and Jim J. Bullock.

After five years of pulling silly faces as Tommy on Third Rock from the Sun it seemed like he would to join the cast-off-second-bananas-from-popular-sitcoms' club and next be seen on a rehab or reality show.

Then something interesting happened. He became one of the most remarkable actors of his generation.

Following the sitcom and a self-imposed two year retirement from acting (to attend Columbia) Gordon-Levitt came back with a vengeance, vowing only to do "stuff that I think is good."

His choices haven't exactly lit the box office ablaze — that may change with the release of his latest film, 500 Days of Summer — but turns in Mysterious Skin and Manic proved him to be a charismatic, fearless, big-screen presence.

In the modern-day film noir Brick, Gordon-Levitt uncovers an underground drug ring while investigating a murder. He's a high school loner with a knack for hard-boiled dialogue.

"I've got all five senses and I slept last night," he says to a school yard bully. "That puts me six up against the lot of you."

He gives an unhinged performance that seemingly channels both Raymond Chandler and The Breakfast Club — totally unique and totally entertaining.

In The Lookout, he went further, deepening his work, creating a person whose character has been shattered.

At the film's beginning he plays the guy you love to hate: He has a rich father, a beautiful girlfriend, good-looking friends and a fast car.

Life is perfect until a car accident leaves him with severe brain damage. When a charismatic former friend (Matthew Goode) manoeuvres him into taking part in robbing the bank where he works as a janitor, Chris thinks he is taking steps toward controlling his life. He doesn't realize he's being manipulated until it is too late.

It's a subtle, well-crafted performance that is always interesting.

Less seen (unless you frequent film festivals) is Uncertainty, just one of the eight films he's shot in the last two years.

The movie, based on the different directions life can take at the flip of a coin, features improvised dialogue and stellar acting.

Keep an eye open for it should it ever earn a theatrical or DVD release.

Somehow, as one writer noted, Gordon-Levitt has "defied the clichéd fates that befall most underage actors when they grow up," and audiences are all the richer for it.

Richard Crouse's Movie Show can be seen every Sunday at 6:30 p.m. on the E! Channel; mrcchaos33@hotmail.com.

Third Rock from the Sun alumnus Joseph Gordon-Levitt has come a long way from his sitcom days with some choice film roles.

Dafoe joins cast of John Carter of Mars

SCIENCE FICTION Willem Dafoe has joined Taylor Kitsch and Lynn Collins in John Carter of Mars, a big-screen adaptation of the Edgar Rice Burroughs book series.

In the story of a Civil War soldier transported to the red planet where warring races vie for control, Dafoe will play Tars Tarkas, a leader of the Thark race who knows that the only way his people can survive is if they turn away from war, a position that may cost him dearly.

Andrew Stanton (WALL-E) is directing the Walt Disney Studios project. Stanton wrote the screenplay with Mark Andrews.

Hurt Locker's explosive tale

He may have long played a sidekick in films like North Country and S.W.A.T. but with his new movie, The Hurt Locker, about to hit theatres next Friday, Jeremy Renner is set to make the jump to leading man playing a rash, bomb-disabling commando.

"They're not like your typical soldier," explained Renner during a recent interview.

Somewhat aloof about landing the big role, the actor insists he was attracted more by the particularity of the part.

"I fell in love with the script because it was about EOD (Explosive Ordnance Disposal)," said Renner of the elite squads based in Iraq.

"What I found interesting about the story is that there isn't much story. It's about these characters and how when they're good at their job, it seems so effortless and that's really fun to watch — especially a job that's so interesting as squatting over a (bomb) that could take you out at any moment."

Co-star Anthony Mackie was also shocked by his research.

Relating a story he heard, Mackie summarizes the resonance of the film through the tale of one soldier who held blast caps between his teeth, until he blew his jaw off.

"It's just one of those things where you never can play it safe," said Mackie.

"At any second, something could go wrong so you always have to be on it; you always have to be professional and those guys who aren't, sooner or later it catches up with them."

Indian firm plans to invest in Spielberg's studio

FUNDS Director Steven Spielberg's DreamWorks Studios could receive $825 million in film financing to begin producing movies starting this year, an Indian company involved in deal talks said Wednesday.

Reliance ADA Group, the Indian conglomerate, is in talks with DreamWorks Studios partners Stacey Snider and Spielberg in New York, and the $825 million figure has emerged from those talks as a possible funding slate for DreamWorks Studios.

The deal between the two companies, which announced a plan to work together last year, has not been finalized.

But the ongoing negotiations over financing come after DreamWorks Studios said in February that the Walt Disney Co would distribute its films. Under the terms of the deal, which could allow DreamWorks to make five to six films a year, Reliance would match whatever financing DreamWorks can get from a syndication of banks.

The $825 million funding slate announced by Reliance would break down as $325 million from the Indian conglomerate, $325 million from the banks and $175 million from Disney.

But the total amount could change if DreamWorks raises more from banks. That would increase the matching equity investment from Reliance, which has agreed to provide up to $550 million.

The deal between Reliance and DreamWorks was initially valued at $1.2 billion, but Amit Khanna, chairman of Reliance Big Entertainment, a division of Reliance ADA Group, said that much money is not needed now. REUTERS

Lucas tops Forbes' earnings list

MONEYMAKERS Star Wars creator George Lucas topped a list of Hollywood's highest male earners on Wednesday, making an estimated $170 million in a year that saw the release of his fourth, blockbuster Indiana Jones movie.

Steven Spielberg, who directed Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull, took second place after making about $150 million between June 2008 and June 2009, according to Forbes.com.

The Forbes list was dominated by men behind the camera rather than screen stars, with movie and TV producer Jerry Bruckheimer — the man behind hit series like CSI and Cold Case listed as the third biggest male earner with an estimated $100 million.

Lucas

"In Hollywood the stars get their pictures on the covers of magazines and designers ply them with free clothes, but producers earn the big bucks," the Forbes.com website said.

Forbes.com compiled the high-earning list by looking at producers, actors, musicians and television personalities in the industry and then talking to Hollywood insiders to estimate earnings over the past 12 months. REUTERS

Billy Talent powers up

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

If you're not one of the thousands intimately familiar with Billy Talent's music, there's a good chance you've dismissed the foursome for being too pop punk. It's a tag that band has been saddled with for years, and one they've always felt was unjustified.

"People always lumped us in with the next pop punk band that was just around the corner that no one cared about," says bassist Jonathan Gallant at the Four Seasons in Toronto. "We never felt those comparisons were fair."

"It was absolutely frustrating to get pigeon-holed like that," adds singer Ben Kowalewicz. "It was very hard at the beginning, but now we don't care."

While the band has gotten over the name calling, many fans still avoid Billy Talent because they don't see a difference between the Toronto-based group and acts like Sum 41 and Simple Plan. But, they've never really sounded like these bands. Their music was always more brash and more rock than most pop punkers, and their third disc should prove it.

Billy Talent III is a major step up from the group's previous albums. With Sabbath-like riffs and a more metal-meets-hard rock sound, this record has the power and guts that's mostly eluded the band. Their tunes are still as catchy as ever, and the Kowalewicz/Ian D'sa vocal attack remains intact, but the band is definitely treading new ground.

"We took a step back (after hearing Ian play the songs) and thought, 'This is pretty riffalicious,'" says Kowalewicz. "This is definitely a throw back record to a lot of mid-'90s bands we were listening to. It's very Soundgarden-esque in a lot of ways."

Part of the reason for that '90s sound has to do with their producer, Brendan O'Brien. He's worked with everyone the Stone Temple Pilots to Bruce Springsteen, but it's his long stint as Pearl Jam's producer that's made him famous.

Needless to say, Billy Talent was excited about working with the grunge legend, and he regaled them with plenty of stories about some of alt-rock's greatest acts. ("We're not privileged to share any of them," says Kowalewicz.)

But Kowalewicz still gets excited about one particular moment with O'Brien. "At one point he said, 'Sorry guys I have to fly to Seattle and go see Pearl Jam,' and me being the biggest Eddie Vedder fan, I was like, 'What?' Eddie ended up giving him a lighter and then Brendan gave me the lighter. It's on my mantle."

This record likely won't turn Kowalewicz into the new Eddie Vedder, but it's a sure bet that the disc will bring in new fans, even the ones who disliked the band in the first place. And if you still can't stand Billy Talent after this? Be prepared to hate them for a long time.

"For people that do like us, we hope they can cut through the BS detectors and appreciate a good song for a good song," says Kowalewicz.

"Because we're going to keep writing records until we're 70."

MP3s starting to show their age

SoundCheck

Alan Cross

metronews.ca/soundcheck

We tend to think of the MP3 files that zing around the Internet and into our computers and portable music devices as uber-modern technology. And why not? The fact that we can cram tens of thousands of songs into a thing the size of a deck of cards approaches the realm of magic.

MP3s have managed to outlast all its competitors, chiefly because it could not support any digital locks. The MP3 codec was born before Digital Rights Management (DRM) and could not be locked down, much to the consternation of the music industry. MP3s worked on virtually any device (including the iPod, a big part of why it became so entrenched with consumers) and when the record labels started swinging their big DRM stick around, consumers eschewed any file format that might have interfered with their ability to move their music around. Only Apple's AAC format — the default format used by iTunes — could say it had any traction and trust. The same can't be said for WMA, ATRAC3, Real G2 or Liquid Audio.

But MP3 technology is has already passed its 20th birthday. It's a product of the 1980s and is starting to show its age. It's only about audio; it's can't store much extra information other than what is "tagged" to the file (like artwork); and it's certainly not very interactive. This is where a French company comes in with a format they call MXP4. Simply put, this new technology extends the capabilities of a basic music file into areas like video and the ability to contain multiple tracks.

Several artists like Lily Allen, Dave Stewart (Eurythmics) and Basement Jaxx have begun experimenting with MXP4s. Because the format allows for different tracks to be pulled from a single file, you can do things like take a guitar track out or add in a new beat. In other words, fans could remix their favourite songs. DJs would have an easier time of creating mash-ups, too. And MXP4 files can contain video, too.

Sounds cool, huh? But consumers have been burned before (Sony rootkit, anyone?) so the first and biggest hurdle will be to gain consumer trust. If people believe that someone is trying to screw them with technology again, then yet another promising advance might die before it gets a chance to prove itself.

30 Rock, Mad Men lead again

The Tina Fey comedy 30 Rock and 1960s period drama Mad Men led the Primetime Emmy nominations Thursday in a broad field full of fresh faces competing for U.S. television's highest honors.

NBC's 30 Rock had a leading 22 nominations, including best TV comedy and best actress for Fey, who took the acting Emmy in 2007. Mad Men on cable channel AMC had 16 nominations, including best drama. Both shows won the Emmy in those categories last year.

Among the networks, cable channel HBO led the field with 99 primetime Emmy nominations, while Showtime had 29 and AMC pulled in 23. Broadcast network NBC earned 67 nominations, followed by ABC with 55, CBS with 49 and Fox with 42.

More nominees were added to the leading categories for the first time this year in a bow to growth of strong dramas and comedies on U.S. television, particularly on cable TV.

"There is so much good work, we have really recognized the diversity on television today," said John Shaffner, chairman and CEO of the Television Academy.

The Academy said 41 of the 83 nominations for comedy and drama programs were different from last year. They included drama newcomer Big Love, HBO's controversial polygamy series, animated comedy Family Guy on Fox and HBO comedy Flight of the Conchords.

Actor Simon Baker of the new CBS crime show The Mentalist got a best actor nomination, while Jim Parsons of The Big Bang Theory and Toni Collette of Showtime's United States of Tara were among the fresh faces in the comedy category.

Sketch comedy series Saturday Night Live, which drew record audiences for NBC during last year's U.S. presidential election campaign, had 13 nominations, including a best guest actress nod for Fey's skits as Republican vice presidential candidate Sarah Palin. Singer Justin Timberlake also received a guest actor nomination for Saturday Night Live.

Alan Baldwin was nominated best comedy actor for his role in the network TV spoof series 30 Rock, which dominated the Emmy nominations for a second year. Baldwin won the award last year.

MAD MEN HOPES FOR REPEAT

Mad Men, which won the best drama Emmy last year marking an award breakthrough for basic cable shows, will compete against legal program Damages on FX, Breaking Bad on AMC, serial killer drama Dexter of Showtime, Fox medical series House and ABC's Lost.

Along with 30 Rock, comedy series nominations included HBO's Entourage, NBC's The Office, Weeds from Showtime and How I Met Your Mother on CBS.

In the race for best actor in a drama, Bryan Cranston will hope to repeat his surprise win last year for his role as a chemistry teacher turned drug dealer in Breaking Bad. Jon Hamm of Mad Men, cranky doctor 30 Rock's cast, seen here at the Screen Actors Guild Awards this year, earned 22 Emmy nominations this year.

Doctors probed by California in Jackson's death

INVESTIGATION California's attorney general said Wednesday his office has run several doctors' names and several potential aliases through its prescription drug database to aid police investigating the death of Michael Jackson.

Attorney General Jerry Brown said his office was not the lead agency in probing Jackson's sudden death — a role it took in the fatal overdose of Playboy model Anna Nicole Smith in 2007 — but was assisting other agencies as they try to track down prescription drugs that may have killed the King of Pop.

"We've found some things, but this is early on," to provide details, Brown told Reuters.

Brown's office monitors all over-the-counter prescription transactions in California, using a database that contains the name of each doctor, patient, medication and quantity.

He said his investigators were given "dozens" of names to run through its system by police probing Jackson's sudden death, several of them doctors and others potential aliases thought to have been used in obtaining the prescription drugs.

The findings could be used to show that "there were drugs in quantities and character that are lethal in combination," which in conjunction with the official autopsy could lead investigators to determine exactly what killed the 50-year-old singer and dancer.

Judge tosses Trump lawsuit over net worth

COURT A New Jersey judge Wednesday dismissed a lawsuit for defamation filed by Donald Trump against an author whose book gave an estimate of the real estate developer's wealth much lower than Trump's own.

Superior Court Judge Michele Fox rejected arguments by Trump's lawyers that he had been the victim of "actual malice" as a result of Timothy O'Brien's book Trump Nation: The Art of Being the Donald published in October 2005.

Reading her opinion, Fox also ruled that co-defendant Warner Books was not "vicariously liable," as Trump had argued, because O'Brien was an independent contractor.

O'Brien, editor of The New York Times' Sunday business section, cited three confidential sources who estimated Trump's net worth at between $150 million and $250 million, much lower than Trump's own estimates of around $4 billion.

Fox said Trump had failed to prove that O'Brien knew the information from his sources to be false or had used the information recklessly.

Trump claimed his business and his reputation had been damaged by the book, which has sold about 17,000 copies. He told The Wall Street Journal in May that he was worth about $4 billion, down from an earlier estimate of $5 billion to $6 billion in early 2005.

Fox cited defense arguments that all three sources had similar estimates of Trump's net worth. Fox noted that O'Brien had also included Trump's own estimate in the book but excluded the author's. The plaintiffs contended that O'Brien did minimal investigation to support his claims, had a history of negative reporting about Trump, and ignored information provided by Trump's associates.

Twilight role transforming Lefevre's life care. I was jetlagged, a mess, no makeup. "I can't be a slave. I don't mean this to diminish terrorism, but it is a bit like it. They function like terrorists."

Speaking of terror, Lefevre stars in the TV mini-series The Summit, a doomsday thriller airing this Sunday on CBC, set during a G8 meeting in Canada. She plays a documentary filmmaker exposing abuses in the Colombian rose trade, and who also happens to be the Prime Minister's daughter. Her character falls victim to a man-made plague being tested on rose workers.

Lefevre says she understands why audiences enjoy scary, apocalyptic scenarios. "These huge disaster movies about biological warfare that wipes out humanity in three days seem so far fetched ... It's reassuringly epic. It calms our fears."

Lefevre says The Summit inspired her to think globally. "I love documentary films," she says. "We shot in Ecuador and I did a lot of research on the roses industry. The same human atrocities are also in the chocolate industry in Africa. I got passionate and met coffee workers and chocolate sellers and roses and the list of exploitations I found."

"Chocolate, coffee and roses are so integrated into our everyday lives. Try to go a day without chocolate if you're a woman! Try not to go to Starbucks. We consume these things in mass quantities."

Montreal's Rachelle Lefevre has let the bull out of the gate. Her life is about to change dramatically and unequivocally thanks to a vampire phenomenon known as The Twilight Saga.

She looms large as Victoria the vengeful vampire in New Moon and Eclipse.

And although she only appeared in the first installment, Twilight, very briefly, she says it has impacted her life in ways she never imagined.

"I think things might get heavier now because my role is bigger in the second and third films," she says over the phone from Los Angeles. "Certain things are wonderful. I get to read for films I wouldn't have gotten to read more, I'm traveling more and doing more press."

"The difficult part is being photographed walking down the street. I was just in what I thought was a private moment with my boyfriend (Jamie Thomas King) at a restaurant and we thought we were alone in the world on patio. When we left, the paparazzi chased us down the street."

Lefevre understands she chose to work in a job that puts her out there, but adds the attention can be frightening.

"I feel like there are two sides to fame," she says. "It's like a seesaw. Sometimes I would absolutely not leave the house without hair and makeup and cute jeans. The other day with my boyfriend, I just couldn't be bothered to

Part one of The Summit airs Sunday night on CBC. The mini-series concludes next Sunday night

Exhibiting aboriginal art

FocusOn First Nations
HANNAH ZITNER
for Metro Canada

Curators across the country are challenging traditions as they focus on exhibits displaying aboriginal work with an emphasis on fine art over ethnographic examination.

Until recently, aboriginal art had found its home in museums and galleries as documentation of a culture, a trend the National Gallery of Canada and art houses across the country are trying to buck.

"When we think of preserving, we think of the future and having really good documents for showing these times. But, it's important to view these works as art and not just ethnographic documentation," Greg Alan Syliboy's work, seen here, is one of the pieces in the Art Gallery of Nova Scotia's collection.

Hill, Audain curator of Indigenous Art at the National Gallery of Canada said from Ottawa.

It wasn't until 1986 that the country's national gallery made its first "self-conscious purchase" of contemporary aboriginal art: Carl Beam's The North American Iceberg. Since then, their collection has grown to roughly 2000 First Nations, Inuit and Métis pieces.

Just outside of Toronto, the McMichael gallery — which has a 100 per cent made in Canada mandate — has just kicked off an 11-week show featuring 40 contemporary First Nations artists.

"We want to underline the fact that they are the finest artist working in Canada today. They take traditional art and use it as a starting point for self-expression," Tom Smart, executive director and CEO of the gallery said.

One purpose of the exhibit is to look at a revival of some traditional techniques nearly forgotten after the Canadian government repressed many aspects of Indigenous art, culture and ceremony.

Further east, the Art Gallery of Nova Scotia in Halifax is also making an effort to expand their aboriginal collection.

Since acquiring their first Inuit print in 1991, the permanent collection has increased to include 160 works in the Inuit gallery and 120 in the First Nations room.

Shannon Porter, the Curator of Collections at the gallery, said part of the reason collectors took so long to include this type of art, is that it was simply overlooked.

Dear Beth & Brian,

My favourite Breyers Moment happened the other day when I was at home nursing a sore back and my brother, who's a doctor, decided to come over to help make me feel better. He prescribed two bowls of Breyers® Double Churn Banana Cream Pie then we spent the afternoon laughing and reminiscing about when we were kids. When I asked why he prescribed two bowls he said, "because Banana Cream Pie was very contagious."

Happily contented

Brian:

That's sweet, say, what flavour would he prescribe for thinning hair?

Beth:

Treat yourself well and create your own Breyers Moments. Try the scrumptious, luscious Breyers® Double Churn Banana Cream Pie — it's the delightful and delicious way to share the love with those who matter most.

Mischa removed by police: Reports

EMERGENCY Mischa Barton was allegedly removed from her West Hollywood home Wednesday by police, usmagazine.com reports an LAPD spokesperson as confirming.

"We responded to her home last night on a medical issue," Officer April Harding tells Us. "We assisted with it. She was removed from her home."

Harding did not release details on where Barton was taken, citing California privacy laws. A source tells Us Barton allegedly called the police herself after having a "freak out."

Jackson's kids his own?

TITO ON THE DEFENSE

Michael Jackson's brother Tito has come forward to dismiss any speculation that the late King Of Pop was not the biological father to his three children, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

Although none of the children are black, thus not mimicking what you would expect Jackson's children to look like, Tito said that he believes Jackson's youngest son Blanket, seven, looks particularly like his dad.

Speaking to the Mirror, Tito said: "They are all his children. Blanket is Michael's, I can tell. Those eyes don't lie. Their eyes are Michael over again. I see a lot of Michael in him."

What's more, he added that Paris and Prince's white mother Debbie Rowe determined their colouring. He said: "Paris and Prince are Michael's children. Yes they are. Just because they look white doesn't mean they are not his. I have an uncle who is married to a white girl and they have three kids. Two of them are white and one is black."

Simpson struggling post-split

TRY A TUB OF ICE CREAM

While Tony Romo is reveling in his renewed membership to the Singles-R-Us Club, Jessica Simpson is having a hard time coming to grips with being dumped a day before her 29th birthday, people.com reports.

"Jessica was really blindsided," says a Simpson family friend. "She's sad, mad, and confused. Her emotions are all over the place."

Another source close to Simpson tells People that "it's been difficult lately" for the pair, who first started dating in November, 2007.

Since the sudden split, Simpson has been laying low. "She is holding up OK," says the Simpson source.

Metro Recipe of the Day

Fettuccine with Broccoli

INGREDIENTS:

- 10 fresh basil leaves
- 3 sprigs of parsley
- 2 scallions
- 2 small cloves garlic
- 2 tbsp (25 ml) Dijon mustard
- 1/4 lb (125 g) softened butter
- 2 large heads broccoli, to give 1 lb (500 g) florets
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) olive oil
- Salt and black pepper
- 1 lb (500 g) fresh fettuccine or tagliatelle

GARNISH:

- 10 cherry tomatoes

METHOD:

1. Put large pot of water on to boil for pasta. Rinse and dry basil and parsley and chop finely. Trim and rinse scallions; finely slice green tops and set aside, then slice white bulbs. Peel and crush garlic.
2. Blend mustard and butter in bowl then stir in sliced onion bulbs, garlic and herbs, crushing against bottom of bowl to release flavours. Set aside.

3. Rinse and trim broccoli into florets. Add oil, salt, pasta and broccoli to boiling water, return to boil, and cook 4 minutes, or until pasta is al dente.
4. Meanwhile, rinse and halve cherry tomatoes.
5. Thoroughly drain pasta and broccoli to pot and toss gently in butter over moderate heat until pasta is well coated; do not allow to fry.

6. Transfer pasta onto serving platter, season and garnish with scallion tops and tomatoes.

ARIES

MARCH 21-APRIL 20

Sudden good news will cheer you up immensely and may even convince you that things are not as bad as you had begun to believe.

LIBRA

SEPT 23-OCT 23

Even if you do win some people over they will most likely change their minds again tomorrow.

TAURUS

APRIL 21-MAY 21

As always your advice is spot on and others know they should act on what you suggest — but they won't. Maybe you should leave them to it.

SCORPIO

OCT 24-NOV 22

Your chances of success will increase dramatically as cosmic activity around the midheaven angle of your chart focuses your mind on essentials.

GEMINI

MAY 22-JUNE 21

Mercury, your ruler, moves into the most open and outgoing area of your chart today, which will do wonders for the social side of your life.

SAGITTARIUS

NOV 23-DEC 21

You may have kept out of the limelight of late but as from today you will feel more positive about facing the world again.

CANCER

JUNE 22-JULY 22

Your thoughts will turn to money matters today and by the time the Sun leaves your sign on the 22nd you will have come up with a cunning plan.

CAPRICORN

DEC 22-JAN 20

No one doubts your strength of character, but you will need more than that over the next few days.

LEO

JULY 23-AUG 23

You will find your voice today. If anyone was wondering what it is you believe in they won't be in the dark much longer.

AQUARIUS

JAN 21-FEB 18

It may be tedious having to explain what it is you expect of people, but not everyone possesses your flair for big ideas.

VIRGO

AUG 24-SEPT 22

You may think you have good reason to believe that some individuals are up to no good but don't make a song and dance about it.

PISCES

FEB 19-MARCH 20

A small change in your working routine now could have massive benefits later on. Do what's right for you, not other people.
